

WEEKLY DRAGON TALES

Living the Langdon LAIR life

Hello Langdon school families,

I have a feeling there were a lot of parents sitting at the ball diamond like me or doing yard work and taking advantage of the fabulous weather this weekend. The week ahead looks amazing. Hats and sunscreen might come in handy!

We have a very busy week ahead with multiple classes going on fieldtrips, the band concert on Thursday evening and Friday and the Sarah Thompson grade 5s coming for a tour on Friday. Mr. Legault and I are spending a lot of time figuring out staffing and schedules for next year while also ensuring this year wraps up as smoothly as possible. This time of the year can be a lot of fun for students with so many activities and the nice weather. But it can also be stressful as they try to stay focused and prepare for final assessments. Many children are up later because of the lighter evenings and activities. These things can affect mood and increase or decrease energy levels, so staff are doing their best to be proactive with expectations while guiding students to make good choices.

Don't forget that yearbooks are available for purchase on School Cash. Mrs. Gray and the yearbook committee have been working hard taking photos, editing, writing and formatting. If there are any parents out there with team photos of any kind, please email them to Mrs. Gray at mgray@rockyview.ab.ca.

If you happen to drop your child off in the morning, we asking that you avoid U-turns and use the traffic circle. There have been a few close calls this year and we want everyone to feel safe crossing the street to and from school.

Don't forget to share your voice for this year's Our School Parent survey. You have until June 6 to participate. Please use the following link:

A huge congratulations to Cairo Wood. Her art piece, Battle of Emotions, came in First Place in the Middle School category for the RVS Mental Health Out Loud contest! Incredible work Cairo!

Have a great week!
